DISCUSSANTS: Godfrey Cheshire, filmmaker Robert Hinton, New York University and film's historical consultant

Godfrey Cheshire's richly observed 2008 documentary about his family's North Carolina plantation - and the colossal feat of moving it to escape urban sprawl - is a thoughtful and witty look at the lingering remnants and still-powerful mythology of plantation culture and the antebellum South. An award-winning film critic turned filmmaker, Cheshire uses the relocation of his family's North Carolina plantation house to embark on a surprising and multi-layered journey. While observing the elaborate, arcane preparations for moving a centuries-old house over fields and a rock quarry, unexpected human drama, from both the living and the dead, emerges. And a chance encounter leads Cheshire and his cousins to discover a previously unknown African American branch of the family through Robert Hinton, and found that they have their own take on Midway and its legacy. The film is 94 minutes long and will be followed by a discussion with the filmmakers.
