STYLE GUIDE

The Journal staff edits each accepted article manuscript and book review in two phases. First, we comprehensively fact-check each work (including both the text and endnotes in article manuscripts) to ensure historical accuracy. Second, each work is edited line-by-line for structural order and readability. All submissions should be double-spaced in order to expedite our editing. In book reviews, the Journal attempts to represent a diversity of voices, achieved by silent light editing. In article manuscripts, we expect clear, scholarly prose and often heavily edit—revising language to further the argument, simplifying convoluted sentences, and eliminating unacademic terms and redundancies. Our editorial procedure for article manuscripts, however, is a dialogue: stylistic revisions are generally suggestions that we submit to the author for approval. As the utility of a style guide is determined by its inclusiveness, we welcome your contributions, both emendatory and supplementary.

ON TEXT

Journal style generally avoids the use of the first person, jargon, and rhetorical questions. Section divisions in the text are not used. All dates should be written in the month-day-year sequence (i.e., May 13, 1607). For overly technical language, the introduction of definitions will often be solicited from the author. Briticisms will be revised to American usage, and gender-neutral and politically aware language will be privileged as appropriate. In most matters, the Journal is guided by The Chicago Manual of Style. For spelling and word division, we refer to Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, as recommended by The Chicago Manual of Style. Regarding the use of ellipsis points, or dots, to indicate omissions within quoted material, we adhere to the “rigorous method” of The Chicago Manual of Style. This method is also explained in Historian's Handbook: A Key to the Study and Writing of History by Wood Gray et al. ([2nd ed.; Boston, 1964], 61), which is quoted as follows:

Deletions must never change the original meaning. Indicate the deletion by three alternately spaced dots (thus . . .) except at the beginning of a sentence, or by four if it immediately follows a completed sentence in the original (thus. . .), the first one being the period belonging to that sentence, or (thus . . .) if the quotation ends with an uncompleted sentence.

The following section selectively documents examples of stylistic preferences that are either notable or recurrent in the Journal.

TREATMENT OF WORDS AND PHRASES COMMON TO THE JOURNAL

in alternation Joseph McCarthy (“you don’t get in a pissin’ contest with a polecat” [quoted by Robert Dallek in Lone Star
Rising: Lyndon Johnson and His Times, 1908–1960
(New York, 1991), 453]), Johnson eventually engineered McCarthy’s censure by the Senate.

ABBREVIATIONS: Most abbreviations such as U.S. and Ph.D. do not have a space between each letter; however, spaces do separate first and middle initials of a person’s name such as W. E. B. Du Bois.

with comma, no italics: i.e., ID EST, or THAT IS e.g., EXEMPLI GRATIA, or FOR EXAMPLE

COURT CASES:

would ordinarily be italicized,
as in:

book titles The Mind of the South: Fifty Years Later
ships: The Sinking of the USS Cairo
legal cases: From Brown to Bakke: The Supreme Court . . .
newspapers: The South Carolina Gazette, 1732–1775

SPECIAL CHARACTERS:

EN DASH: (Should appear as —, longer than a hyphen - but shorter than in compound adjectives, an em dash —.)
if one element is an pre–Civil War, post–World War II open compound United States–Mexico resolution (but U.S.-Mexican War) or if two or more elements are hyphenated compounds: quasi-historian–quasi-novelist to denote continuity between numbers or dates: 1960–1963, pp. 1–8, May–Sept., Fall–Spring

ON NOTES

All factual statements beyond common knowledge should be documented in numbered endnotes created by the automatic footnoting function of the author’s word-processing program and located at the end of the manuscript. The precise source of all quotations and quoted phrases should be indicated in the endnotes unless the source is clearly indicated in the text. Lengthy discursive endnotes should be avoided. One endnote should not be used to cover more than one paragraph. The number of the endnote should be placed only following the terminal punctuation of a sentence, not in the middle. An endnote with multiple citations should indicate the exact source of each documented quotation with parenthetical identifications. Multiple citations within a single endnote are separated by semicolons. Only if the multiple citations are listed in the form of a sentence (e.g., "See also" or "For studies that emphasize class see . . .") should the word and be inserted before the last source. The endnote number should be raised and separated by only one space from the first word of the endnote text. Endnotes will appear as footnotes in the Journal.

The first citation of a source should contain both the author's name and the full title as they appear on the title page of the work. If the title is unduly long, three ellipsis points are placed at the end of the cited form of the title to indicate the omission. The author and title are followed by parentheses containing the place and year of publication. The name of the press is not included. However, preceding the place and year of publication and within the same parentheses, the number of the edition or the number of volumes for multivolume works should be included when relevant. The abbreviation et al. is used to refer to a number of authors, editors, or compilers greater than three—for example, Ira Berlin et al., eds. After the closing parenthesis, the page number or relevant page range in arabic numerals is cited without abbreviations. If an entire chapter is cited, indicate that with the phrase "chap. 4." Finally, and only if necessary for clarity, the first citation of the work should be terminated with a semicolon and a statement announcing the chosen short title, using the phrase "hereinafter cited as." Subsequent citations usually include only the author's last name, short title (omitting the initial article such as The or A in the title), specific volume number, and page numbers.

To refer to a note in another work, use the following order of elements: the abbreviation for page or pages and a space; the page number; the italicized lowercase letter n and the endnote number—for example, (p. 111ⁿ⁷⁷) or (pp. 503–4ⁿ²³). To refer to a note within the same work, simply name the material and the number of the endnote in a statement—for example: ¹¹ See the good roads propaganda cited in note 2.

Abbreviations such as U.S., Ph.D., and P.O. do not have a space between each letter; however, spaces do separate first and middle initials of a person's name such as W. E. B. Du Bois. The use of ibid. is appropriate only when the possibility of ambiguity does not exist: within the same footnote to repeat the immediately preceding reference; or, in a different footnote, if the preceding footnote has only one reference.

ABBREVIATIONS IN ENDNOTES:

Months are not abbreviated in footnotes.

in italics:	ibid.	IBIDEM or IN THE SAME PLACE (do not use with preposition in)
	ca.	CIRCA
	[sic]	EDITORIAL PROTEST
in roman type:	c.	COPYRIGHT
	et al.	ET ALII or AND OTHERS
for states, use abbreviation, not postal form:	Ky.	KENTUCKY (do not use KY)
	N.C.	NORTH CAROLINA (no space between letters, and do not use NC)
	Maine	MAINE (do not use ME)

En dashes are used in endnotes between inclusive numbers and dates to indicate continuity—for example, Vols. 1–21, pp. 1–8, 1960–1963.

EDITED AND COMPILED BOOKS:

Note that the abbreviations ed. or eds. and comp. or comps. are set off by commas after the editor's or compiler's name and are repeated in short titles.

For an edited work when the title does contain the author's name, the editor is listed first.

⁴⁵ Willoughby, "Infecting the Enslaved Body," 2–4.

NEWSPAPERS:

Section numbers precede page numbers where appropriate. First and subsequent citations are generally identical. For most newspaper citations we require page numbers. Headlines and bylines, when available, are also required. For quoted material, page numbers are absolutely necessary. Column numbers are useful but not required.

ON NEWSPAPER TITLES:

City or town of publication precedes newspaper title, in roman type, regardless of whether city is on masthead.
If newspaper title on masthead carries a state, county, or regional identification, then title is preceded by city of publication in roman type.
For lesser known cities, the state abbreviation follows the city, in parentheses and roman type.

MANUSCRIPT RECORDS:

We cite manuscript records in the form preferred by the repository that holds the collection. The information that is generally required is the title of the item, date, folder/file number (if necessary for location), box number, collection name, and repository information (in parentheses). In subsequent citations, use only the shortened form for the name of the collection, and do not repeat the location when referring to other collections in the same repository.

For manuscript collections.

COURT CASES:

The order of cited elements should read: the entire case title in italics; the volume number of the reporter in arabic numerals; the abbreviated title of the reporter in roman type; the opening page number of the decision; the year of the court session in parentheses; and the word at followed by the page number for the exact location of the citation. For federal court decisions, the United States Supreme Court Reports is the preferred source and may be cited as U.S. throughout. In subsequent citations, the case title, with any clarifying information in parentheses, is followed by the page number of the quoted material; however, the year is always excluded.
